HARTFORD, Cr., Nov. 6.—The Legisla-ture stands: Senate—Republicans, 8; majority as this. I'll tell you what made me think so. It was the way the McKinley bill was being made use of. All over the country prices have been going up, or going to go up because of the McKinley bill, and generally on articles which were not effected by that measure. Some of my friends went to New York to buy a piano, and they were told they had better buy at once, as pianos were going to increase $100 in price because of the McKinley bill, although, as a matter of fact, pianos were not in the new tariff.

Scottpale, PA., Nov. 6.—All the Frick coke plants in the region are in operation to-day with the exception of Fair-chance, where the notice to reaume did not reach in time. The arbitration committee will meet to-morrow to decide the question between the Knights of Labor and the company.

"Inshavegue" at the Grand.

A large audience witnessed the first production of this powerful melodrama at the Grand last night. The company gave a competent performance of the drama, and made a good impression upon the large audience present. Seats are now on sale at Weir's.

STANLEY INTERVIEWED

VOLUME XXXIX--NUMBER 65.

Regarding the Attacks in Major Bartellot's Diaries.

TROUP'S PART IN THE MATTER

Lord Chief Justice of England. His Lordship had heard a case in his private room, and though he had come plained of feeling ill during the hearing, he was able to give a decision in the matter. Directly afterward he was seized with an apoplectic or paralytic stroke. The nearest doctor was hastly summoned and messengers despatched to Lord Coleridge's residence, and Lady Coleridge proceeded instantly to the court to render what assistance she could to her stricken husband. His could to her stricken husband. His doubt his an ante-room. Other doctors were summoned and are now in attendance upon him. They declare that his condition is critical.

Latra—It has been ascertained that Lord Coleridge is suffering from neither apoplexy or paralysis, as was at first stricts.

The doctors to night pronounce the condition of Lord Coleridge as not serious, and express the hope that he will be able to resume work next week.

Yambuye, and after Bartellot's murder, Bonney had written a report to the committee, as he, in common with others, had thought that I was dead. So, when I asked him if he bad any evidence of what had taken place, he said: "I have a letter which I was just about sending to the committee." I said, "I am here, and as your superior officer of the expense of the cape it." After reading it, I asked him to address it to me, as chief of the expedition, in-

The log book was written every day like a ship's log, stating what had occurred during the day. It is signed officially. It is signed by Major Bartellot, William Bonney, or whoever was the officer of the day.

The log book is very valuable, and with the social results in my possession fully justify me in my consure of the rear column, and acquit me of the charge that I have acted otherwise than as an honorable man and an efficer."

Mr. Stanley met newspaper men tomight at his hotel for the purpose of an interview, and the important portions are given here. Said Stanley, in response to an inquiry: "Bartellot was shot on July 19, and I arrived on the seere August 17. Therefor I did not see the deed, nor did I witness the cause which led to it. The whole and sole cause of the violent temper of the Major. Bar tellot had just come from Nyansa and swas in camp. His very presence seemed to stir up the natives in camp. He demanded sixty men from the Arab chief as couriers when he had already all that was mecessary. The chief told him that he could not give them to him for they were not to be found. He threatened him with reporting his demial and again demanded the men and then complained to Bonney. Bonney told him he had enough men already, and if he put the fifteen loads of villes into their hands they could go ahead and protect themselves.

That was July 17. He wont to the Arab chief and beat him with a cypress stick and left him in a horrible condition.

Cuicago, Nov. 6 .- A platform, upon which was standing a number of employes of Lyon & Healy's musical instrument factory, collapsed yesterday and instantly killed Wm. Tishendorf and seriously injured Dora Gilford, Wm. McDaniels, Henry Bodline, Jno. Steele and John Kohler. Some time ago the employes of the factory, about 300 in all, arranged to have their photographs taken, and employed a carpenter to construct a temporary stage for them to occupy while sitting for the negative.

When the employes had taken their positions on the platform, it gave way under the weight. The hundreds of men and women were thrown in a mass, and those who escaped without broken bones anffered painful bruless and scratches.
